SETTLEMENT MADE IN RATE DISPUTE

Subscribers on Independent Rural Lines Win Fight Against Seymour Mutual Company.

OLD RATE TO BE EFFECTIVE

Controversy Compromised and New Terms Will be Filed With Public Service Commission.

The rate controversy which has been in progress between the independent rural telephone companies in this county and the Seymour Mutual Telephone Company, relative to the switching charge through the local exchange was compromised late Saturday afternoon. The farmers feel that they waged a winning fight as practically every point for which they contended was granted. The terms of the compromise were embodied in a formal petition which will be filed with the Indiana public service commission for approval. L. C. Griffiths, president of the Seymour company, told the farmers that he would recommend that the compromise be accepted by the commission and he expressed confidence that the utility body would approve it.

Under the compromise terms, the former rate of fifty cents a year for exchange service in Seymour will be reinstated. However, if a call originating on a rural line extends beyond the lines of the local company in this city a five cent switching charge will be made. This was acceptable to the farmers.

The public service commission fixed a rate of $3 a year for switching service at the time the rates in this city were readjusted and the farmers objected to the increase. Edward P. Elsner, attorney for the farmers, filed a petition with the commission asking that a rehearing be given on this phase of the order inasmuch as the farmers did not know their rate was to be raised and had no opportunity to present their attorney. The commission granted a rehearing with which was held several weeks ago.

Afterwards the commission reduced the switching charge to fifteen cents a month and gave the farmers the option of a toll charge of five cents for five minutes. Neither of these proposals were acceptable to the independent companies which represent about 750 rural subscribers.

The fight between the farmers and the local company has been one of the most bitter that has ever been waged upon a utility in this county. It is quelled only by the revolt by local telephone users which resulted in the organization of the Seymour Mutual Company which later was taken over by Mr. Griffiths.

HOME GROWN STRAWBERRIES SELLING AT HIGH FIGURE

First of the Local Crop Being Marketed Here—Receipts Will be Heavy Next Week.

The first of the locally grown strawberries are reaching the market but the price is so high that the demand is not heavy. The berries were sold from $6.50 to $7.25 a crate. Growers believe that the plants will not begin to bear heavily until the latter part of the present week.

Seymour housewives who are accustomed to preserving many strawberries are watching the price of ugsar and are hoping that it will be reduced before the canning season comes. If the sugar market remains at its present level many people will be unable to can the normal amount of fruit this summer and the reduced demand is expected to have an effect on the price of fruit.

LIFE OF SAUL IS BASIS OF SERMON

The Rev. J. H. More Delivers Strong Address at the Annual Baccalaureate Service.

EDUCATION FORCE FOR GOOD

Both Senior and Junior Classes Attend in Body—Other Ministers Assist in Program.

"Abilities—Used, or Unused," was the subject of a forceful sermon delivered Sunday night by the Rev. James Harold More, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, at the annual baccalaureate service which was held at the Central Christian church. All of the churches affiliated with the City Ministerial Association joined in a union service which was beautiful and impressive.

The Senior and Junior classes attended the service in a body. The special musical numbers were given by the Boys' Chorus of the High School under the direction of Miss Adelaide Gasaway, musical director in the city school. Miss Margaret Edgar was the organist during the special numbers.

The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. O. G. Misamore of the Congregational church, and the Rev. B. E. E. Fischbach of the Trinity Methodist read the scripture lesson. The Rev. F. A. Hayward of the First Baptist, offered prayer and the Rev. Charles W. Whitman of the First Methodist, pronounced the benediction. The Rev. W. E. Carroll, pastor of the Central Christian church, presided at the service.

Mr. More selected as his text "Saul Took His Sword and Fell upon It," 1 Samuel 31-34. In part he said:

Strong Address Given by The Rev. F. A. Hayward at the First Baptist Church Sunday.

REVIEWS PROBLEMS OF TODAY

G. A. R. and W. R. C. Honored Guests at Morning Worship Hour—Special Music.

Tastefully decorated with flags and flowers, the First Baptist church presented a fitting welcome for its honored guests Sunday morning when in accordance with their annual custom, the members of the G. A. R. and the Women's Relief Corps observed Memorial Sunday.

Miss Marie Gudgel introduced the service with organ selections with military themes. A male quartet sang "Still We Remember you" and Norman Barkman and daughter, Miss Norma, gave violin and piano duets of patriotic review. Mrs. T. R. Carter played a beautiful saxophone number and interspersed were church hymns of a national nature.

The memorial address given by the Rev. F. A. Hayward was "In Remembrance" with the text taken from St. Luke 22:19 "Do this in remembrance of Me." In greeting the guests present, Mr. Hayward said: "I greet you the members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. in behalf of a church which has a deep seated interest in the affairs of a nation and more particularly as they develop the well being and common good of all men, whether rich or poor, black or white, native or foreign born. I also greet you in behalf of the many others of your number who will this day unite with you in community spirit to memorialize the men who died for freedom and unity.

DAMAGE SUIT CASE ON TRIAL IN COURT TODAY

Fred Beard vs. Ralph Thompson For Damages Resulting From an Automobile Collision.

The case of Fred Beard vs. Ralph Thompson, for damages, is on trial today in the Jackson circuit court today. The case was tried at the February term at which time the jury was unable to agree on a verdict and the plaintiff was granted a new trial.

The case developed out of an automobile collision which happened near Indianapolis several months ago. Beard alleges that Thompson was at fault and is seeking to get judgment for damages to his car. Montgomery & Montgomery are representing the plaintiff and S. A. Barnes the defendant.

Subscription Prices

Beginning Monday, May 31, the subscription price of the Seymour daily papers delivered by carrier will be fifteen cents per week.

Both Seymour papers have tried for months to continue the old price of ten cents per week and have been able to do so only by using paper bought last year before prices made such tremendous advances.

The market price today for white paper is between three and four times what it was eight months ago and it is impossible to continue at the old price any longer.

There is no indication of any fall in paper prices, but rather of a further advance. Therefore, we are compelled to advance the price beginning next Monday to fifteen cents per week. Seymour Daily Republican. Seymour Daily Democrat.

Hitchcock said $15,000 sent into New Jersey from the national headquarters of the Wood campaign was the largest amount sent into any state. RAILROADS EARNED ONLY ONE PER CENT.

Return on Property Investment Last Year was Small, Chairman Elliott Says.

HIGHER RATES ARE NEEDED

Executives Begin Testimony in Support of Request for Immediate Increase.

By United Press.

Washington, May 24—The nation's railroads earned only one percent on their property investment, interstate commerce commission was told today at the opening of a hearing on freight rates. This statement was made by Chairman Elliott of the rate commission of the Association Railway executives, who began the argument on behalf of the roads for a general freight increase totaling $1,017,000,000 annually.

Under the new railroad act the commission must fix rates which will net the railroads six percent, in their valuation. The railroads are now trying to get a readjustment of freight rates. New rates must be 27.85 per cent, higher if the roads are to be able to pay six per cent on their property investment, Elliott told the commission.

Chairman Elliott presented the commission with this statement showing the financial condition of the roads for the year ending Oct. 31, 1919:

Property investment, 20,616,573,399.

Six per cent would have been $1,236,994,402.

Adjusted net operating income $219,217,407.

Deficit below six per cent returns $1,017,776,995.

Total freight revenue $3,653,928,492.

Total all revenues $5,230,981,932.

New rates must be 27.85 per cent higher on the above basis if the roads are to be able to pay six per cent on their property investment Elliott told the commission.

VIEWS OF MINE OPERATORS GIVEN TO COMMISSION

State Institutions May Close Unless Coal Supply is Replenished.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, May 24—Members of the Indiana public commission here today met superintendents of coal carrying railroads and representative coal mine operators to learn the real situation surrounding the shortage of coal cars in Indiana. An effort will be made to plan remedial action. Unless a way is found to obtain fuel for state institutions and certain public utilities these placed will be forced to close soon. John McCardle, commissioner, said.

A combination of strikes and the shortage of railroad cars reduced the coal output in Indiana more than 100,000 tons and caused idleness in 115 miles in the coal field he said.

CARRANZA'S BODY SENT TO CAPITAL

Mexican Authorities Leave Arrangements for Funeral to Two Daughters.

BURIAL AS PRIVATE CITIZEN

Former President of Mexico May be Buried in Municipal Cemetery in Mexico City.

By United Press.

Mexico City, May 24—The body of Carranza, murdered president of Mexico, arrived in the capital on a special train from Puebla at 5:55 a. m. today when municipal authorities asked the dead president's daughters, Julia and Virginia, where they wished the body buried, they replied:

"Before leaving Mexico City our father said he would return to the capital either dead or alive and as President of the Republic. In event he was killed he wished to be buried either at his birthplace or in the municipal cemetery in the section devoted to the poor."

Most of the foreign diplomats including the American charge met the train. It was learned, however, there will be no official honors granted by the nation. The revolutionary leaders said in their opinion Carranza was only a private citizen when he was assassinated Thursday.

The body was taken to the former president's residence where his daughters assumed charge and prepared it for the funeral.

A telegram to General Obregon gave additional details of the murder. The deposed president, according to his message, took the assassin Rodolfo Herrero into his confidence because Herrero was familiar with the Puebla mountains. Herrero previously had sworn his loyalty.

The murder occurred at four a. m. Friday morning, this telegram said. Carranza was asleep when Herrero and his men opened fire. Friends of the president rushed to his aid and battled with them in the darkness.

General Murguia was described as especially daring.

Carranza's body was riddled with bullets, advisers said.

The Carranzista party finally was forced to flee after sixty of their number had been made prisoner by Hererros men. These men it was said, were making their way to Mexico City. Apparently they were freed after the murder.

Senor Ascona, acting foreign minister, today sent a telegram to Mexico's diplomatic corps saying the revolutionary government had directed a strong force to take up pursuit of Herrero and administered the death penalty when the former bandit leader was captured.

The special revolutionary commission appointed to investigate the fight in which Carranza met his death has left for Puebla.

REACHING THE PEAK.

There have been published numerous articles, recently indicating heavy reductions in prices in the near future, but a review of business conditions do not warrant such predictions on any very extensive basis. The most that can be claimed as a result of these occasional reductions is that in many lines of merchandise, though not in all, the peak of prices may have been reached. There will come soon or later a stabilizing of prices on a basis somewhere between prices of a year ago and those now prevailing.

Relative to general conditions

THE WHOLE WORLD knows and reveres the name of the master inventor. History will honor him for his colossal achievements in the field of electricity. No less in importance, however, is his contribution to the realm of music by which he has made all mankind happier. Just as he saw the vision of a sunlit night, so did he conceive the idea of music recreated. Just as he strove to evolve from the faint, flickering candle the radiant brilliance of the incandescent lamp, so did he strive to devel-

Henry Clews a well known financier of New York says in his weekly letter on market conditions:

"The past few days have seen some spasms of price cutting in different parts of the country which, however, appear to indicate no real underlying change in conditions but which are partly advertising and partly an effort to reassure consumers frightened by high prices, the most positive development being a lower price resolution by the National Association of Manufacturers. Industrially the reports from all parts of the country are to the effect that there is a continuation in most lines of the strong and active demand for goods that has been characteristic of conditions for some months past. No indications of serious surplus of production in any important line or of refusal on the part of the community to buy are observable, and, on the other hand, there is no condition of unemployment, while many factories are booked far ahead, some of them into next calendar year.

ADVERSITY FAILS TO PREVENT MARRIAGE

Clifford K. Robbins, Former Seymour Boy, Weds in Spite of Serious Accident.

The following concerning Clifford K. Robbins, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Robbins, formerly of this city, who was seriously injured while at work in the railroad shops at Indianapolis Saturday morning and who was united in marriage to Miss Alice N. Huddleston, of Indianapolis, the same evening at Columbus, is taken from the Columbus Ledger:

Clifford K. Robbins of Indianapolis, refused to let adversity stand in the way of his marriage here last night. A badly injured hand which might have induced the average man to forego all pleasures, even marriage, and seek a hospital bed, and a sleeping parson failed to divert young Robbins from his purpose. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Robbins, of Columbus, and was wed to Miss Alice N. Huddleston, of Indianapolis, at a rather late hour last night by Rev. W. H. Book, pastor of the Tabernacle Christian church, of Columbus.

Robbins, who is an employee in the Beech Grove railway shops at Indianapolis, suffered a painful injury to his left hand yesterday morning which required careful medical attention. Regardless of this fact, however, he proceeded with his bride to Columbus yesterday evening, not to be dissuaded from his purpose and desired to be married by Rev. Book. On their arrival here, the couple went to Rev. Book's residence but vigorous raps on the parsonage door failed to bring any response. Persistency, however, brought the minister to the door partially attired and he informed them that he had retired for the night but consented to perform the ceremony.

Mr. Medcalfe, who is now employed at the Columbus Ledger office, has many friends in this city. He spent several months in France with the A. E. LIFE OF SAUL IS BASIS OF SERMON

Saul. To the psychologist he presents a unique study in divided personality. To the historian he is one of many rulers who could not stand power—whose exalted station proved his undoing. To the moralist he stands as one of the world's conspicuous failures.

"This text—'Saul took his sword and fell upon it,' is descriptive of his whole career. Many swords had been placed in his hands—weapons which he should have used in service but which he used to destroy himself.

"My young friends do you not see the meaning of this story now three thousand years old, in your present position? As Saul you are tonight upon the house tops not overlooking the kingdom of Israel but of your life. Into your hands have been placed many swords. The question is—are you to use these swords to gain victory, in service to others, or are you going to abuse these gifts and kill yourself as did Saul.

"Into your hand has been placed the sword of education. For several years you have been grinding and sharpening that sword until it is now ready for service. Don't think of course, that that sword of education is a life long process.

"What is true of nations is true of individuals. Not every educated man is filled with public spirit. Many an educated man stays away from the polls, excusing himself on the ground that politics is rotten, instead of using the sword of knowledge to rout the foes of political righteousness.

"Many a man who has acquired an education finds that this is a barrier to fellowship with others; becomes

"We hear it said that the love of money is the root of all evil. But the love of money lies at the root of things good as well as evil. It stirs up wholesome ambitions and it also arouses the meanest desires of the heart. The wish to better one's condition is legitimate but the spirit of greed is back of most vices and crimes.

"It is sadly true that many educated men are without any public spirit so it is true as we ministers know that it is the hardest thing to count upon a man of means to give reliable personal experience service. They feel that a subscription that enables others to do good work excuses them from all self giving. The sword of wealth with which they should personally take the field becomes the destroyer of their own self sacrifice for the kingdom of God.

"Or take the sword of religion. There is no mightier weapon that can be put in any man's hands. Read again that 11th chapter of Hebrews and learn what mighty things have been done by faith. By faith mighty obstacles have been overcome and countless lives redeemed. Surely religion cannot hurt anyone. Unfortunately it can.

"There are many other weapons or swords—influence, popularity, friendship—love. In each case the question will arise—am I using these God given gifts as weapons of service or instruments of destruction.

Addressing the members of the graduating class, who stood, Mr. More said:

"Members of the Senior class of 1920—You stand tonight as Saul of old upon the housetops. Before you there lies the kingdom of your career. Into your hands have been put the sword of education and religion. Other weapons will be given you—swords of influence and popularity, of wealth, of friendship and love. How will you use those swords? To use them for self and selfish gain is only to commit suicide. If you are to be warriors in the kingdom of righteousness you must use those swords as weapons of unselfish service. Suicide or success—which of the two roads will you take.

"My prayer for you is this. That you may be able to get out of your own way. That self may be burned out in the cause of His Kingdom. God grant that the Lord Jesus Christ may lay his spell upon your hearts.

HITCHCOCK TELLS OF WOOD EXPENSES

contributions financed the campaign.

Senator Reed, a Democrat member of the investigating committee, halted the questioning with a demand that the committee make a rule either to get specific testimony or to acquire a written statement.

The Michigan campaign, Hitchcock said, was financed by local people and no money was spent from national funds. Illinois and Ohio were financed from Western headquarters, he said, adding he opposed contests in both of these states. Hitchcock said he knew nothing about disbursements from Chicago headquarters. The Dupont interests contributed to the Wood campaign in Delaware, he said.

As to Ohio, Hitchcock said, big expenditures were made but the money came from the Chicago headquarters of the Wood campaign. He said the so-called Wood delegation from Mississippi was not a legally elected one and said he had had nothing to do with it for that reason.

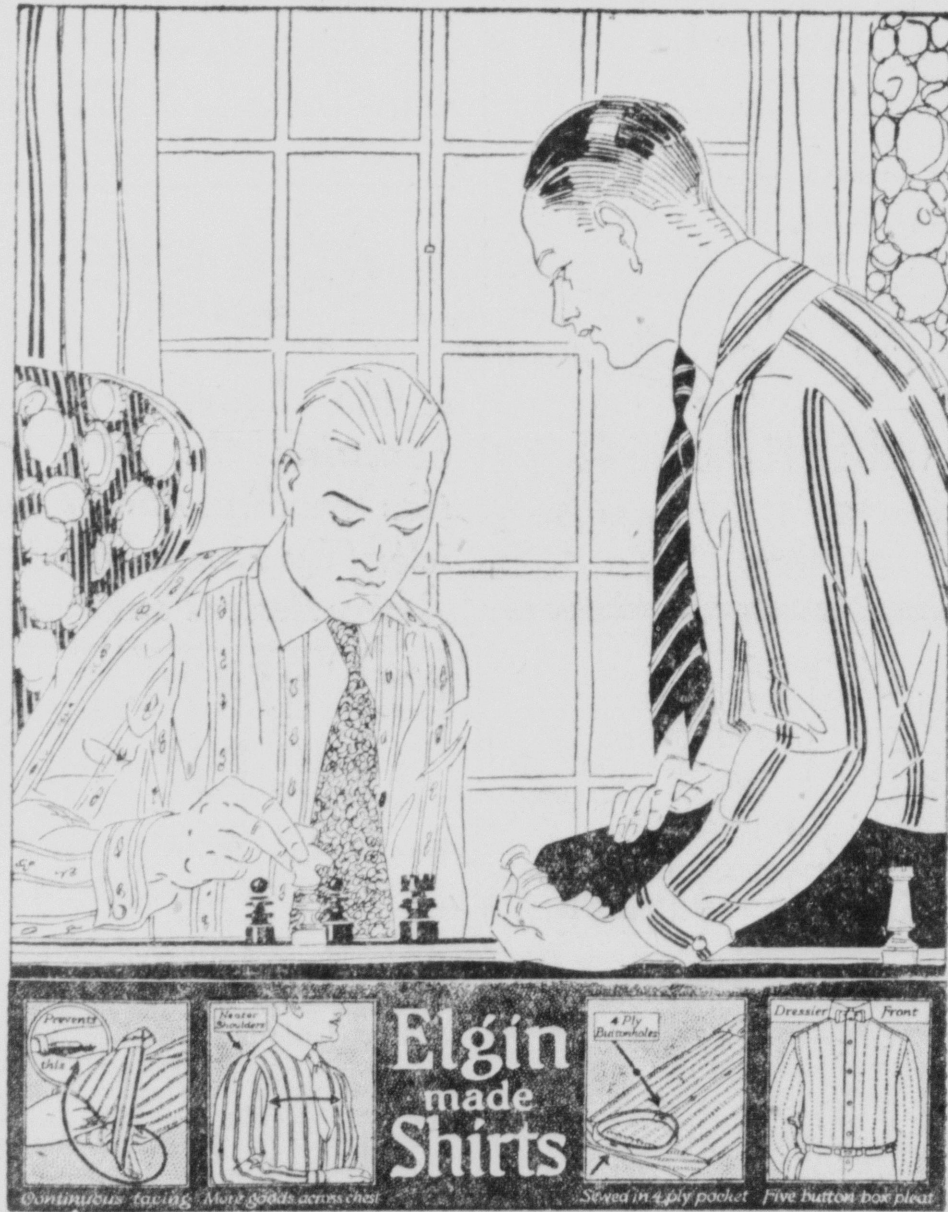

Angus McSweeney, Hiram Johnson's

eastern manager, was the next witness. He submitted a list of contributors and expenditures. He said the eastern organization consists of three men, a woman and three stenographers. Alexander McCabe, state insurance commission of California, had charge of western headquarters. The contributions, McSweeney said, totaled $68,130. The largest was $27,000 he said. Among other contributions listed were Major James Cousins, Detroit, $5,000 and San Francisco headquarters, $8,000.

PLENTY OF PLANTFOOD NECESSARY FOR BEST QUALITY VEGETABLES.

By A. E. Lindquist.

A vegetable garden will be a greater asset than ever this year. Every bit of ground possible of cultivation offers a means of combating the ever-rising high cost of living. And it is none too soon to begin figuring ways and means.

The value of the vegetables produced at home lies not only in their quantity but in the quality, and the quality is governed by the presence of sufficient available plantfood to satisfy the particular demands of each variety of vegetables.

The rich juiciness which determines the palatability of the tomato, the sweetness of the corn, the tenderness of the celery, is dependent upon the presence of sufficient plantfood in the soil in such form that it is available to the plantroots. Most gardeners have had to swallow disappointment and vegetables of poor quality too, after a season of exemplary care of the garden. This is often because the soil has been deficient in one or more of the plantfoods which are necessary for a rapid, steady growth resulting in vegetables which tickle the palate and the gardener's vanity as well. Manure supplies part of this plantfood, but in these days of motor cars and trucks there is scarcely enough manure and it has deficiencies.

There are only three plantfoods which are lacking under ordinary conditions. They are ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash, so these are the only three which we need to concern ourselves with. Ammonia makes the stalks grow rapidly and big; it gives a healthy color to the leaves. Phosphoric acid especially influences the root growth, increasing its vigor and thus the vigor and healthiness of the entire plant, and it later hastens maturity. Potatoes, turnips, lettuce, beets, spinach and radishes all are especially benefited by the presence of plenty phosphoric acid. Potash is the starch producer. It strengthens the stalks of plants. Vegetables like sweet corn, whose quality depends upon the presence of sugar and potatoes, where solid matter is largely starch, and must have sufficient potash if the best quality is to be secured. The yield of potatoes is greatly increased by the application of potash.

Manure has always been applied in abundance when obtainable. It is rich in ammonia, but lacking in phosphoric acid and it does not contain enough potash for most garden vegetables. Whenever it is possible to obtain manure it should be applied, for in addition to its value as a plantfood carrier its organic matter rots and acts as a sponge in holding water and the water soluble plantfoods.

Plantfoods are obtained in what are known as commercial fertilizers. These are sold in bags with their content of the different plantfood printed on the outside of the sack. These are given in percentages; thus a 3-10-2 which means that that particular fertilizer contains 3% am-

Going back to "Pat" Donohoe, Holbrook, Iowa, his famous bull, Black Woodlawn is the grandfather of these black steers that won highest honors at the world's greatest steer show. Harrison & Harrison, Indianola, Nebraska, sold the crop of bull calves from the Iowa bull to N. L. Harrison, Jr., Roggen, Colo., and he bred these "Doddie Babies" that were brought to the Illinois feed lots of John Hubly, Mason City, Ill., and fed into the best carload of cattle at the International.

The winning of the high honor of the year by Range-bred Aberdeen-Angus yearlings is a great achievement for the Aberdeen-Angus, for while this is the fourteenth time in eighteen shows that the Aberdeen-

Angus have won the honor, the Blacks have usually been both bred and fed in the Corn Belt.

The results will be obtained from an application of 1000 pounds per acre, that is equivalent to 5 to 6 pounds per square rod. If the manure application is heavy, 500 to 600 pounds (about 3 1/2 pounds per square rod) will be sufficient.

Fertilizer should be applied in the spring after the plowing or spading and worked into the ground at the time of hoeing, preparatory to planting the seeds. In the care of corn, tomatoes and onions, an additional application of a small amount of fertilizer may be applied near the roots of the plant after they are up to give it a good start.

Fertilizer for the home garden is a well worth while investment; increasing the yield and the palatability of the vegetables more than enough to pay for its cost.

breeders' Association has recently presented Mr. Hubly with a sterling silver pitcher in honor of the event, and will soon take moving pictures of Mr. Hubly's feeding operations and Aberdeen-Angus steers. Mr. Hubly now has 100 head of Aberdeen-Angus calves for the 1920 event.

The American Aberdeen-Angus

tively poor production was due to poor feeding or no feeding at all, according to C. W. Carrick, one of the extension men.

"Hens cannot lay their best unless given feeds that produce eggs. Corn alone or any other grain will not produce many eggs. Grains are most valuable when supplemented with dry mash and animal food. Animal protein must be supplied in the form of tankage, meat scraps, or milk," he says.

Farm hens should have access every month in the year to a self-feeder containing dry mash. The University Poultry Department and many farmers over the state have successfully used a dry-mash of 50 pounds wheat bran, 50 pounds wheat middlings, and 30 pounds high grade digester tankage. These should be mixed together and proportioned by weight. If skim milk or buttermilk is available give as a drink one gallon a day for each 30 hens. The tankage or meat scraps need not then be used. A good grain ration to supplement this dry mash is 180 pounds corn and 70 pounds of oats. If feed wheat is reasonable in price, part of the corn may be substituted by it.

Many people object to this method of feeding as expensive and unnecessary under farm conditions. Of course, feed costs money, but for every dollar invested in feed of the right sort, three to four dollars will be returned. The records show that farm hens do not pick up the necessary feed for good production while by good feeding heavy laying and excellent profits result.

HOME MADE DRESS FORM IDEA POPULAR IN STATE

The home made dress form is cutting a big figure in the efforts of Indiana women who have turned to doing their own sewing in order to combat the high cost of clothing. As a result of the work started before the women who attended the annual short course at Purdue University last January, home economics' classes in several counties have taken up the making of dress forms as one of the lines of work which they intend to push, as the forms may be made for $1.45 while they cost ready made from $6 to $7.

The Hendricks County Home Economics' Association decided at its February meeting to hold a "Dress Form School" at Danville March 12. A letter was sent to the 19 home economics' classes in the county with the result that 90 women attended the school and 11 dress forms were made under the direction of supervisors, 24 of whom had been trained by the home demonstration agent.

All the classes could not be represented, so a special demonstration was arranged for each of these organizations. The project was carried through March and April and now the various communities are continuing their work, with the hope that every member of the classes in the county will have dress forms in their homes. This form naturally helps to cut down H. C. L.

Requests for demonstrations on the making of the dress forms have been received from many communities in the state by the home economics division of the agricultural extension department of Purdue.

SPRAY PEACHES TO PREVENT WORMINESS

Wormy peaches are caused by the larva of the plum curculio. Early peach varieties such as Carman, Mayflower and Greensboro are more often "stung" than the late varieties.

The most important spray for this insect is applied while the little peach is in the "shuck." Here is the formula suggested by C. L. Barkholder, of the horticultural extension staff of Purdue University.

Use 1 1/2 pounds of powdered arsenate of lead and 2 pounds of hydrated lime to 50 gallons of water. The lime prevents the arsenate from burning the peach foliage.

Bulletin 69, Purdue Experiment Station, gives the spray program complete and other valuable information on the subject of peach growing. It is free on request.

FOR BURNING ECZEMA

Apply Zemo, the Clean, Antiseptic Liquid—Easy to Use—Does Not Stain

Greasy salves and ointments should not be applied if good clear skin is wanted. From any druggist for 35c, or $1.00 for large size, get a bottle of Zemo. When applied as directed it effectively removes eczema, quickly stops itching, and heals skin troubles, also sores, burns, wounds and chafing. It penetrates, cleanses and soothes. Zemo is a clean, dependable and inexpensive antiseptic liquid. Try it, as we believe nothing you have ever used is as effective and satisfying.

My Neighbor

My neighbor lets weeds grow in his garden, he lets his house run down, and all his family look patched.

My neighbor decides many important things; and he is sure all things would be all right if they were done his way.

My neighbor decided long ago that advertising was waste; that he would never read it because he did not want any one to tell him what to buy.

My neighbor may be right. The moon may be made of green cheese. But, as I see it,

My neighbor is no neighbor of mine; he just lives next door because he was born fifty years too late.

My neighbor spends as much money to live poorly as I do to live well. As most of my money goes to meet living expenses, I want all the good things it will bring me.

Advertisements tell me all about these good things. Advertisements give me the opportunity to compare all varieties of the things I would buy. Advertisements help me pick the best for my purpose and my purse.

I will not argue with my neighbor. He may be right; but, personally, I would rather be myself than be my neighbor.

I KNOW READING ADVERTISEMENTS SAVE MONEY FOR ME.

The suddenness of her attack amazed him to such an extent that he did not take the trouble to contradict her. Instead he blurted out, angrily and defiantly: "I'll build that road if it costs me my life—if it costs me you. Understand! I'm in this fight to win."

"You will not build that road," she reiterated.

"Why?"

"Because I shall not permit you to have some financial interest in the Laguna Grande Lumber company, and it is not to that financial interest that you should build the N. C. O."

"How did you find out that I was behind Ogilvy?"

"Intuition. Then I accused you of it, and you admitted it."

"I suppose you're going to tell your uncle now," he retorted witheringly.

"On the contrary, I am not. If it will comfort you the least bit, you have my word of honor that I shall not reveal to my uncle the identity of the man behind the N. C. O. The fact is, both you and Uncle Seth annoy me exceedingly. How lovely everything would have been if you two hadn't started this feud and forced upon me the task of trying to be fair and impartial to you both. Forgive my slang, but—I'm going to hand you each a poke soon."

"Shirley," he told her earnestly, "listen carefully to what I am about to say: I love you. I've loved you from the day I first met you. I shall always love you; and when I get around to it, I'm going to ask you to marry me. At present, however, that is a right I do not possess. However, the day I acquire the right I shall exercise it."

"And when will that day be?" Very softly, in awesome tones!

"The day I drive the last spike in the N. C. O."

Fell a silence. Then: "I'm glad, Bryce Cardigan, you're not a quitter. Good-bye, good luck—and don't forget my errand." She hung up and sat at the telephone for a moment, dimpled chin in dimpled hand. "How I'd hate you if I could handle you!" she murmured.

Following this exasperating but illuminating conversation with Shirley Sumner over the telephone, Bryce Cardigan was a distressed and badly worried man. For an hour he sat slouched in his chair, chin on breast, the while he reviewed every angle of the situation. He found it impossible, however, to disassociate the business from the personal aspects of his relations with Shirley, and he recalled that she had the very best of reasons for placing their relations on a business basis rather than a sentimental one. For the present, however, it was all a profound and disturbing mystery, and after an hour of futile concentration there came to Bryce the old childish impulse to go to his father with his troubles.

"He will be able to think without having his thoughts blotted out by a woman's face," Bryce soliloquized. "He's like one of his own big redwood trees; his head is always above the storm."

Straightway Bryce left the office and went home to the old house on the knoll. John Cardigan was sitting on the veranda, and from a stand beside him George Sea Otter entertained him with a phonograph selection—"The Suwanee River," sung by a male quartette. He could not see, but with the intuition of the blind he knew.

"What is it, son?" he demanded gently as Bryce came up the low steps. "George, choke that contraption off."

Bryce took his father's hand. "I'm in trouble, John Cardigan," he said simply, "and I'm not big enough to handle it alone."

The leonine old man smiled, and his smile had all the sweetness of a benediction. His boy was in trouble and had come to him. Good! Then he would not fail him. "Sit down, son, and tell the old man all about it. Begin at the beginning and let me have all the angles of the angle."

Bryce obeyed, and for the first time John Cardigan learned of his son's acquaintance with Shirley Sumner and the fact that she had been present in Pennington's woods the day Bryce had gone there to settle the score with Jules Rondeau.

With the patience and gentleness of a confessor John Cardigan heard the story now, and though Bryce gave no hint in words that his affections were involved in the fight for the Cardigan acres yet did his father know it, for he was a parent. And his great heart went out in sympathy for his boy.

"I understand, sonny. I understand. This young lady is only one additional reason why you must win, for of course you understand she is not indifferent to you."

"I do not know that she feels for me anything stronger than a vagrant sympathy, dad, for while she is eternally feminine, nevertheless she has a masculine way of looking at many things. Her first loyalty is to her uncle; in fact, she owes none to me. And I dare say he has given her some extremely plausible reason why we should be eliminated; my I think she is sorry that it must be done, nevertheless, in a mistaken impulse of self-protection she is likely to let him do it."

"Perhaps, perhaps. Eliminate the girl, my boy. She's trying to play fair to you and her relative. Let us concentrate on Pennington."

"The entire situation hinges on that jump-crossing of his tracks on Water street."

"He doesn't know you plan to cross them, does he?"

"No."

"Then, lad, your job is to get your crossing in before he finds out, isn't it?"

"Yes, but it's an impossible task partner. I'm not Aladdin, you know I have to have a franchise from the city council, and I have to have rails."

"Both are procurable, my son. Induce the city council to grant you a temporary franchise tomorrow, and buy your rails from Pennington. He has a mile of track running up Laurel creek, and Laurel creek was logged out three years ago."

"But he hates me, old pal."

"The Colonel never permits sentiment to interfere with business, my son. He doesn't need the rails, and he does desire your money. Consider the rail problem settled."

"How do you stand with the mayor and the council?"

"I do not stand at all."

"That makes it bad."

"Not at all. The Cardigans are not known to be connected with the N. C. O. Send your bright friend Ogilvy after that franchise. He's the only man who can land it. Give him a free hand and tell him to deliver the goods by any means short of bribery. I know you can procure the rails and have them at the intersection of B and Water streets Thursday night. If Ogilvy can procure the temporary franchise and have it in his pocket by six o'clock Thursday night you should have that crossing in by sunup Friday morning. Then let Pennington rave. He cannot procure an injunction to restrain us from cutting his tracks, thus throwing the matter into the courts and holding us up indefinitely, because by the time he wakes up the tracks will have been cut. The best he can do then will be to fight us before the city council when we apply for our permanent franchise."

"Partner, it looks like a forlorn hope," said Bryce.

"Well, you're the boy to lead it. And it will cost but little to put in the crossing and take a chance. Remember, Bryce, once we have that crossing in it stands like a spite fence between Pennington and the law which he knows so well how to pervert to suit his ignoble purposes."

He turned earnestly to Bryce and waved a trembling, admonitory finger. "Your job is to keep out of court. Once Pennington gets the law on us the issue will not be settled in our favor for years; and in the meantime—you perish. Run along, now, and hunt up Ogilvy."

It was with a considerably lighter heart that Bryce returned to the mill office from which he lost no time in summoning Buck Ogilvy by telephone.

"Thanks so much for the invitation," Ogilvy murmured gratefully. "I'll be down in a pig's whisper." And he was.

"Bryce, you look like the devil," he declared the moment he entered the latter's private office.

"I ought to, Buck. I've just raised the devil and spilled the beans on the N. C. O."

"To whom, when and where?"

"To Pennington's niece, over the telephone about two hours ago."

Buck Ogilvy smote his left palm with his right fist. "How did you let the cat out of the bag?"

"That remarkable girl called me up and accused you of being a more screen for me and amazed me so I admitted it."

Ogilvy dropped his red head in simulated agony and moaned. Presently he raised it and said: "Well, it might have been worse. Think of what might have happened had she called in person. She would have picked your pocket for the corporate seal, the combination of the safe and the list of stockholders, and probably ended up by gagging and binding you in your own swivel chair."

"Don't, Buck. Comfort and abuse is what I need now."

"All right. What do you want me to do to save the day?"

"Deliver to me by six o'clock Thursday night a temporary franchise from the city council, granting the N. C. O. the right to run a railroad from our drying yard across Water street at its intersection with B street and our Front street."

"Certainly. By all means! Easiest thing I do! All right, old dear! I'm on my way to do my d—dest which angels can't do no more. Nevertheless, for your sins you shall do me a favor before my heart breaks after falling down on this contract you've just given me."

"Granted, Buck. Name it."

"I'm giving a nice little private, specially cooked dinner to Miss McTavish tonight. We're going to pull it off in one of those private screened corridors in that highly decorated Chink restaurant on Third street. Moira—that is, Miss McTavish—is bringing a chap-eron, one Miss Shirley Sumner. Your job is to be my chap-eron and entertain Miss Sumner, who from all accounts is most brilliant and fascinating."

INSPECTOR GIVES FACTS TO PUBLIC

Has Regained His Lost Strength and Says Tanlac Can be Depended On.

"The whole force down at the plant have noticed the change Tanlac has made in me, and a day never passes without somebody saying how strong and healthy I am looking," was the statement made the other day by James F. Dwyer, R. F. D. B. Sugar Creek Township, West Terre Haute, Indiana. Mr. Dwyer is employed as brick inspector by the Vitrified Brick Co. of Terre Haute.

"I had suffered for five years with stomach trouble," he continued, "and last year I took a sudden turn for the worst and have been going down hill ever since. I got so I didn't know what it was to ever feel hungry, and when I forced myself to eat it nauseated me so I could hardly retain a thing. Why, sometimes my stomach was so upset I couldn't even retain a cup of coffee. My stomach pained me continually and at night I always had a fever and could never get any rest to do any good. I lost strength until I got so weak I could hardly hold out at my work during the day, and when night came I was so completely exhausted I was just able to make it home."

"That was my condition when a friend of mine advised me to try Tanlac and I honestly believe I ate more in the first ten days after I commenced taking Tanlac than I did for four months before. Why, I can hardly wait for meal time to come, and everything tastes so good I want to be eating all the time. My stomach feels like new and it makes no difference what I eat I can digest it without a particle of trouble. I have regained all my lost strength and am several pounds heavier. My whole system has been built up, I never have a fever now and I sleep like a log every night. I advise anyone suffering like I did to give Tanlac a trial, for I know what I'm talking about when I say it can be depended on to do the work."

Tanlac is sold in Seymour by Maxon's Pharmacy, and in Crothersville by C. W. Taulman, and in Brownstown by Chas. Brock.

roared. "Why, she's the girl that bluffed the secret of the N. C. O. out of me!"

"Do you hate her for it?"

"No. I hate myself."

"Then you'll come. You promised in advance and no excuses go now. The news will be all over town by Friday morning; so why bother to keep up appearances any longer?"

And before Bryce could protest Ogilvy had thrown open the office door and called the glad tidings to Moira, who was working in the next room; whereupon Moira's wonderful eyes shone with that strange, lambent flame. She clasped her hands joyously. "Oh, how wonderful!" she exclaimed. "I've always wanted Miss Shirley to meet Mr. Bryce."

soldiers of the Southland to their beloved dead. In token of this love they strewed flowers on the graves and the plan being taken up by some of the northern Posts who had become interested it became a common custom to honor the dead of the Civil War by a service of memorial and by the decoration of graves with flowers well chosen and humbly placed.

"Written into this service of memorial are the words of the Lord Jesus himself when he gathered about him his comrades in sorrow and said "Do this in remembrance of me." Not in marble shaft with engraven eponium but in the human hearts and human act he desired that love be forever memorialized. Associated with love was service and both were to be recalled with regularity urging consideration of the depth of love and the wonder of sacrifice. And down through the ages this wonderful church memorial has been observed with dignity and regularity. It is a fitting thing.

"This text—"Do this in remembrance of me" comes to us at this time and hour and appeals to us from a triangular point of view and divides itself into three suggestive fields of presentation. A Compelling Act of Love—The Challenge of Bravery and Sacrifice; The Human Touch betokens Brotherhood.

"Do this—so spoke the Master of Men when he was about to go to Calvary. He was referring to a regular and simple memorial which these workers and comrades of his might observe indicating to some extent the throbbings of love. Now love cannot be expressed satisfactorily amid confusing noises. Love cannot find adequate expression in periods of demanding toil. Human love finds itself at its best just a little removed from the movement of the multitude and so the artists indicate on canvas, marble or in poetry the figures as they sit in the gloaming or watching the sinking of the western sun. Mother love through the day of unceasing cares cannot express itself in soft words and tender caresses but when the twilight is reached she gathers up her little folks and gently kisses them to rest. Even the Master of Old called his disciples from the crowded street to a restful place where they might contemplate an honest view of God and understand sincerely the needs of a world of men.

"We live in an intense day. We worship the new idol—Jass, the idol of noise, confusion, synecopation and movement. The finer things are being lost in the shuffle of this new worship. The greater character is forgotten. You are asked to set apart this day and in a spirit of contemplation catch the spirit of '61 and '65. This compelling act of love is more valuable to a correct stabilization of the real American loyalty than all the programs for energetic sport which may be defined for Independence Day. With heads bowed and chastened hearts made so by the struggle to make men free and equal; with a love for those days which still live in all their sacrifices and human toil; you do this.

"I do not think we should allow the World War just closed to overshadow the Civil War so heroically won. A fresh victory is always apt to eclipse an older battle. The enthusiasm of the overseas struggle is in a measure living. The young soldier still walks the flower-strewn way. The shouts of the multitude ring in his ears. He still lives in his uniform. But this wonderful Crusade cannot make us forget that the Civil War was on our home land and was for the distinct purpose of the unity of our nation and no struggle—however altruistic—can equal that in supreme importance. The very thing for which these soldiers went to battle, for which we gave money, men and prayers has not been assured us, even yet and world peace still hangs in the balance unprocured. Returning to the land of their birth, these men in khaki find a condition of unrest, uneasiness, and uncertainty threatening the very well being of the nation. And this, my friends, is the thing that you fought for. The unity and well being of the nation was the cause and reason for your supreme struggle. Now, I am unalterably opposed to a separating nation. Separating lines which allow differing forces to clash can bring to us as American peoples nothing but disaster. You went to war because class consciousness had been aroused and one man declared himself better than his brother. It mattered not to you whether he was black or white. He was living on American soil. He too worked that he might live. He too had children in whom he loved. And according to American ideal every man should be equal and should be a common brotherhood. And so the men of '61 went forth from farm, factory and fort with a determination that this must be a nation of one people, one purpose and one program.

"Beginning with that memorial date Dec. 20, 1860, when South Carolina seceded and continuing with the seceding six states on Feb. 1st, 1861 with a provisional government with definite heads, until the end of May, 1865 this land was drenched with honest blood for a distinctly American purpose. Five years of unselfishness, national privation and human sacrifice was the price of unity and peace. 4,000,000—nine out of every ten Southerners and four out of every ten Northerners were in that army that clashed for supremacy. Over 1,000,000 men were offered on the altar of freedom. American freedom. $9,000,000,000 was the piled up monetary cost. The years of the struggle pass before you panorama like with the five years of continuous bloodshed.

Mr. Hayward here gave reviews of the outstanding battles and closed saying:

"And though the toil of blood had been heavy it was seemingly necessary that one man die for the nation and Lincoln, the greatest president this nation has ever had went down through the valley of the shadows. Thus did we pay dearly and well for a United States."

"There is a new call to remember Civil War struggles. A time of new slavery has been reached, it is the slavery of the silver dollar. Manhood character, religious convictions, charity and brotherhood—even the unity of the nation is threatened by it. Classes are organized to war against each other. Old lines or racial hatred are being again drawn and under new names we sneer at the foreign born. Religious idealism has been lost. Home strength has been weakened. America faces a serious hour. Nothing is more needed than a new national consciousness making for an inseparable unity. Protestantism and Catholicism must find common plans for reinforcing spiritual values. Native and foreign born must meet on a common platform of loyalty and train the coming generations. Employer and employee must co-operatively seek each others interest and progress. The silver dollar must be set aside in favor of the Man of the Golden Rule and peace, harmony and plenty come within our gates. And that people whose unselfishness, loyalty for national strength and devotion to industrial, moral and religious integrity shall be asserted shall bring into being again a nation of one people, one purpose and one program. In remembrance therefore of the bloodsoaked battle grounds of the Civil War I urge you to pray and work for a purified and uplifted national life.

"For Me. Thus did Christ speak. Thus do the men of the vine-covered battle graves speak. Our life blood was for the freeing of men and the unity of the nation. Carry on for our sake. Maintain a United States. Memorialize this day so that men may see the broken bodies and out-poured blood for the dearest of flags. Allow no longer a government for the people. Insist on a government by the people. Break up industrial profiteering and greed, educational disloyalty and alien hatred; political spoliation and government misrule; religious misdeeds and antagonisms write into the pages of a new day, new purposes, new ideals and a new brotherhood. Do this in remembrance for me. No greater event has previously been written into American history than the Civil War, with its mighty appeals, purposes and sacrifices and its maintenance of a people and nation united. And no sadder event can be written into the future history if this freedom for which the million of brave men in '61 and '65 died shall be lost even for a short period. We therefore the heroic American dead, who died on American soil, for American ideals—summon every man and every woman to their duty and in that call each broken mangled body cried from the soil on which we stand "Do this in remembrance of me."
